THE OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY

Department of East Asian Languages and Literatures

SPRING 2027
Chinese 4404: Chinese Drama

GE Literary, Visual, & Performing Arts

Screenshot from the staged reading of Amy Ng's adaptation of Guan Hanqing's (ca. 1220-after 1279) play Saving a Courtesan

- Deepen your cultural knowledge and intercultural awareness
- AI-proof your analytical, communication, and social skills
- Tap into your creative thinking and problem-solving skills
- Gain confidence in public speaking and performance

Ever wondered where the original Mulan came from? Wanting to connect with your own cultural roots or with the culture of your parents and grandparents? Looking for ways to impress future clients and team members in East Asia with your cultural prowess? Wanting to pursue your interest in media and the arts through improvisation and performance?

Looking for a fun course that advances your communication, problem-solving, and team building skills? Interested in analyzing ethical dilemmas and building your leadership capacity? Seeking to expand your tech literacy? Wanting to burnish your resume/CV with a possible publication

Take C4404 and enjoy an exhilarating ride through eight centuries of Chinese plays, theater, and history, with Prof. Patricia Sieber 夏頌, an expert in classical Chinese drama and the founder of the Chinese Theater Collaborative.

No language prerequisites * Tue/Thu 2:20-3:40 (46 Hagerty Hall)